The Afghan Whigs have announced their new album, "Soft Control," set to be released on August 21, 2026. This will be their decimo album and marks a significant milestone in their career, following a reunion in 2011. The album features 10 tracks that were previously recorded as 22, showcasing the band's evolution and collaboration with artists like Petra Haden and Bo Koster. Greg Dulli has expressed a sense of personal maturity, stating that he has worked hard to achieve inner peace and has found a sense of security in his artistic direction.
