A landmark recording in British modern jazz.

The 50th anniversary of 'Kaleidoscope Of Rainbows' by Neil Ardley.

Newly remastered with new liner notes by Sid Smith.

This marvellous work completed a trilogy of works composed by Neil Ardley that had begun with 'The Greek Variations' and continued with 'A Symphony Of Amaranths', works which were based on a sequence of notes that provided the basis for composition and improvisation.

Originally released in 1976, 'Kaleidoscope Of Rainbows' was a series of pieces based on the five note scale of Balinese Gamelan music. The recording sessions featured contributions from such luminaries as Ian Carr (Nucleus), Paul Buckmaster, Barbara Thompson, Dave MacRae, Tony Coe and Geoff Castle.

The album is now regarded as a landmark recording in British modern jazz, although the compositions also displayed influences from world music and beyond, utilising synthesisers, it is a groundbreaking and thoroughly absorbing piece.
